The Impact of COVID-19 on Women's Experiences of Prenatal Care, Birth Support, and Delivery in the US South

The goal of the proposed study is to explore the context in which COVID-19 may contribute to women, particularly first-time mothers, having suboptimal birth experiences and outcomes. Specifically, we seek to gain a better understanding of the perceptions of the impact of COVID-19 on access to prenatal care, birthing, and post-partum mental health among women who had a high-risk pregnancy and gave birth during the pandemic. By exploring these perceptions, we aim to identify ways in which changing health care policies and practices may impact women's birthing experiences, and strategies for addressing the mental and physical health needs of this vulnerable patient population.

Building Capacity for Full Spectrum Doula Care in Communities of Color Across Georgia

This is a community-engaged study understand the role of Black, Latinx, and White full-spectrum doulas in reproductive care, including contraception, birth spacing, and abortion. Building on work to-date from the original Georgia Doula Study, this iteration will also address these gaps in research, training, and community engagement of full spectrum doulas in rural and underserved communities. This is a partnership between academic researchers (at Georgia State and Emory Universities), clinicians, a BIPOC-led community-based organization (HMHBGA), doulas and doula stakeholders (the GDAWG), and BIPOC student trainees.

A Multi-State Comparison of Messaging and Actors in Abortion Testimony and Legislative Debate Related to Early Abortion Bans in the Southern United States

This grant provides career development and mentorship during my Postdoctoral Fellowship through the Society of Family Planning professional network. The research study funded by this grant expands on a formative narrative analysis examining public testimony and legislative debate related to Georgia's 6-week abortion ban. The purpose of this study is to examine the public discourse in southern states where "fetal heartbeat bans" were debated between 2018-2019. Publicly available legislative video archives of these sessions will be transcribed verbatim and examined using a categorical-content narrative analysis approach.
