Lower-income settings experience a high burden of gender-based violence (GBV) and violence against children (VAC); yet, investigator and institutional research capacity is limited, and data gaps limit the ability to monitor violence-related Sustainable Development Goals. To address this gap, Emory University, Hanoi Medical University, and a global multidisciplinary network will implement a training program in research mentorship, research in GBV and VAC, implementation science, and leadership/science dissemination for sustained capacity in GBV and VAC research and practice in Vietnam.

COURSES/CURRICULA

Emory University

University Course: Global Security and Leadership in a Complex World

An initiative of the Provost the University course encourages a multidisciplinary examination of issues and topics by faculty and students from across the university. This course provides perspective on the many substantive, thematic and functional components of global security in the context of the complicated and challenging international environment.

Rollins School of Public Health, Emory University

Global Health 500: Critical Issues in Global Health

Introduces MPH students to global public health issues of two kinds: (1) fundamental crosscutting issues such as the relationship between global health and economic development, and (2) selected thematic areas such as child survival, HIV/AIDS, and global tobacco control.

Global Health 508: Health and Human Rights

Engages students in critical thinking around issues at the intersection of health and human rights in order to inform effective public health/human rights programming.

Global Health 526: Interdisciplinary Perspectives in Human Rights

Analyzes how human rights are designed to provide the conditions for the exercise of human agency as the means to enabling people the opportunity to live their versions of the good life. Cross-listed in the graduate schools of Law, Theology, and Political Science.

Global Health 591Q: Epi Info

Provides an overview of the main Epi Info programs including the creation of data entry screens, the construction of databases, data storage and analysis.

Emory College

Global Health Culture and Society 300R-002: Health in Humanitarian Emergencies

This course introduces students to health and social perspectives in humanitarian response and explores a range of topics including: gender and vulnerable populations, war and health, refugees and internally displaced persons (IDPs), food and nutrition, water, sanitation and hygiene (WASH), mental health, and risk communications.

Online Courses

Communicating During Global Emergencies (Coursera, Summer 2018)

This course presents key topics on communications during emergencies based on the manual for Crisis and Emergency Risk Communication, or CERC. This manual was first published in 2002 to outline best practices for effective communication during a public health emergency. CERC is informed by lessons learned from previous responses, communication sciences, and psychology.

Health in Complex Humanitarian Emergencies (Coursera, Fall 2016)

This course covers the technical and management principles that are the basis of planning, implementing, and evaluating health programs for acutely displaced populations in developing countries. The emphasis is on refugees in camp situations. It includes modules on assessment, nutrition, epidemiology of major health problems, surveillance, and program management in the context of an international relief operation.

Ebola: An Evolving Epidemic (Coursera, Spring 2015)

Discusses the evolving Ebola epidemic and its various aspects including disease prevention, management and treatment, response to the epidemic, ethical considerations and the post-Ebola global health landscape. This was the first English language massive open online course about Ebola and the first MOC about an ongoing complex humanitarian emergency. Over 7,000 learners from 171 countries participated in the course.

PRS535D: Questionnaire Design and Analysis

Taught annually, spring term. Presents the basics of questionnaire development and data analysis, as well as the interpretation and reporting of findings. The course introduces students to both quantitative and qualitative data methods.

Curriculum Development

Sergio: A curriculum for college and graduate level students

Sergio is the Emmy nominated HBO documentary film based on the book by Pulitzer Prizewinning author Samantha Power, which documents the life and tragic death of Brazilian born diplomat and former UN High Commissioner for Human Rights Sergio Vieira de Mello. A curriculum for teaching college and graduate level students in public health has been developed to accompany the film. The curriculum is especially relevant for those interested in humanitarian aid work and first responders. Teaching themes of the curriculum include identity, ethics and professional development. The curriculum is available in English, French and Portuguese.

Public Health Ethics

A four-hour course which focuses on ethics and their role in the practice of public health. This course offers an introduction to ethical theories, case studies, and the ethical codes of various health professions.

Communication Strategies in Public Health

This four-hour course focuses on the process of health education. Major principles discussed include: health communication planning strategies, media literacy, social marketing, and media advocacy.

Creating Public Health Promotion Web Pages

An eight-hour course that focuses on the creation of web pages for publication on the World Wide Web. Hands-on instruction in Hyper Text Mark-up Language (HTML) and instruction for creating hypertext and graphics are included in the course.

A Prostate Cancer Curriculum for Public Health Professionals

A two-day course in prostate cancer education for public health and nursing professionals in the state of Georgia. This course provides instruction in the anatomy of the prostate, risk factors, diagnosis and treatment options, health education strategies and policy issues in the field of prostate cancer.
