Emory University, Department of Epidemiology (Atlanta, GA)

Project: CLIA-validation of at-home viral load monitoring

Oct 2020 - Present

Mentor: Dr. Patrick Sullivan

- In collaboration with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), design and launch a validation study of HIV viral load monitoring using microtainer and dried blood spot self-collection in order to obtain CLIA-validation.
- Obtaining CLIA-validation for at-home viral load monitoring will then allow researchers to provide results of viral load levels in future studies.

Project: FAZST Trial Per-Protocol Effect Analysis

June 2021 - Present

Mentors: Drs. Jacqueline Rudolph & Ashley Naimi

- The Folic Acid and Zinc Supplementation (FAZST) Trial is a completed randomized controlled trial of folic acid and zinc supplementation for males among couples receiving fertility treatment.
- Create a data set that will allow the team to conduct a per-protocol effect analysis that incorporates time-varying confounding.

Project: Diagnostic Score for Female Genital Schistosomiasis (FGS) in Zambia

June 2021 – Present

Mentor: Dr. Kristin Wall

- Develop and pilot test an innovative standardized diagnostic algorithm for female genital schistosomiasis and other common causes of genital ulcerative and inflammatory disease in Zambian government clinics.
